

GAME PROPOSAL (Making it boring to keep the expectations low)

TEAM NAME: 4minar

TEAM: RAVI (cptOreo)

EMAIL: dhavla.ravi@students.iiit.ac.in , dhavla.ravi@gmail.com

INDIECONNECT ID: <https://www.indieconnect.in/@dhavla.ravi>

Rough story theme

A renowned Telugu comic book artist who used to self-publish in his small printing press is dead.

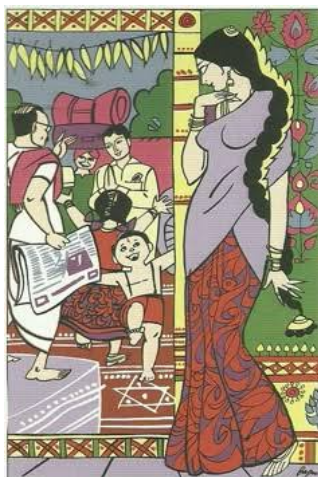

You are there to investigate the murder of the artist.

There's a dark twist to the story. (Contemplating if I should say it, but I probably will—I need points)

Gameplay/Flow (Not writing detailed character flows, but just talking about the gameplay maybe)

- The whole game reveals different elements under different colored lights (planning RGB) of the press, and the setting is inspired by Tholu Bommalata puppetry. (I'm justifying light here and the setting of the game)

- The murder mystery will be solved by piecing together the last comic the man was making and his research for the same (he knew something was up). (Very many comic elements planned here) (This character is actually partly inspired by Telugu artist Bapu, attaching artwork) (So like, I'm justifying comic elements here mostly)

- The twist in the game is the moment you figure out who the murderer is (HEAVY CLIMACTIC Indian MUSIC—think heavy veena): IT'S YOUUUUU (BIG TWIST). You were figuring out how easy it was to catch you, and now you have a timer till everyone arrives and you have to clean the evidence. (I tried. 'Cause now when you play, you know) (That mostly justifies the twist.)